MEMPHIS NEWS AND NOTES

In May your President and Editor of ANSEARCHIN' NEWS attended the genealogical Institute held in Dallas, Texas, by the Local History and Genealogy Society. Much information was given on data to be found in different states by persons who had done research there. The meeting was most rewarding, and the courtesies of the Texas people to their visitors is something to remember. This Society extends congratulations and good wishes for a long continuation of the Texas way of work.

WARNING: Be careful how you send out your work; make it neat and readable. REASON: While in Dallas, one of your President's most valued correspondents, Mrs. W. G. Dixon of that city, asked if I had seen some of my handwriting in the genealogical room of the library. I had not, but it was there! A legal tangle over property had been copied from the Shelby County, Tennessee records, by me on note-book paper, for Mrs. Dixon's "Waller Collection," and is now preserved under glass. So, be careful, for one never can tell where one's work will show up.

Mrs. Willis E. Ayres, Librarian of the Memphis Society, announced at the May meeting that a set of COKAYNE (English records) had been located. The Society voted to purchase them for addition to our library collection, and they are now on order. Anyone doing research in England or on Magna Charta lines will find these books invaluable.

Did you know that:

Margaret (Mrs. Willis E. Ayres) was recently elected Regent of the Dames of the Court of Honor for Tennessee?

Carolyn (Mrs. W. M. Porter) was given a two column spread with picture regarding her genealogical work? Carolyn was one of the three women chosen as the most outstanding Junior DAR's in Tennessee.

Laurence B. Gardiner was elected National First Vice-President of the Huguenot Society of the Founders of Manakin in the State of Virginia, and Lillian (Mrs. L. B. Gardiner) was appointed National Parliamentarian?

Melville (Mrs. Walter K. Page) is Treasurer of the Fort Assumption Chapter, DAR, and State Treasurer of the Daughters of 1812?

Henrietta (Mrs. Charles R. Gilley) is doing research and writing a paper on the yellow fever epidemics in Memphis?

All of which goes to prove that, as active members of our Society, these individuals have time and interest to work in the patriotic societies for which their genealogical work has made them eligible.

Our thanks to Mrs. Henry Moore for her graciousness in inviting us to meet with her at our May meeting, and to Mrs. Willis Ayres for her warm and hospitable invitation for the June meeting. In July the pleasure will be mine to have the group at a night garden party.

Our deepest sympathy is extended to Jerry (Mrs. W. R. Blair), our Query Editor, whose husband died suddenly on May 8th. No one knows better than your President what it means to "carry on" when one's heart is full of sadness.

Jewell Standefer (Mrs. E. M.)

FAMILY HISTORIES:

The many years of research on a family are often lost in a matter of minutes by the person who fails to put his or her notes in printed form and distributes them for safe keeping. A family history does not have to be a "leather-bound edition" to record for posterity the work you have done. This thought was provoked by the arrival of three more volumes of the work of Judge Zelma Wells Price of Greenville, Mississippi. Judge Price is a busy person, and yet she has put into print some nine books containing the history of many of her lines. Volume V, THE WEATHERBEE-NORMAN VOLUME, takes up the family of Bartholomew Weatherbee, born 1593, Yorkshire, England, and William Norman, born about 1651, Yorkshire, England. This book also contains partial genealogies of families of : Bealer, Burridge, Gundry, Moseley and Tucker. Volume VI, THE BOLLING VOLUME, Part I, contains partial genealogies of: Bolling, Pocahontas and Rolfe families. Part II contains partial genealogies of: Batte, Belson, Biddlecombe, Blair, Brassieur, Bridger-Williamson-Taylor, Camp, Cary, Cocke, Fitzhugh-Knox, Fleming, Gordon, Robinson, Ruffin-Kinchin, Smith-Turner-Faunteleroy-Adams and Taliaferro families. No copies of the books are for sale, but they can be seen in all leading libraries. (See the April 1962 issue of AN for information on other volumes.)

A GENEALOGY OF MCGEE HARRIS, LATTER DAY SAINT PIONEER, by Dr. Kenneth C. Bullock, traces the family of McGee Harris, born November 8, 1800, near Lebanon, Wilson County, Tennessee, son of William Harris and Margaret Sloan. His wife, Mary Givens, born February 27, 1802, Stanford, Lincoln County, Kentucky, was the daughter of Robert Givens and Martha Givens. Order from: Dr. Bullock, 1035 North 9th East, Provo, Utah.

AS A TREE GROWS - Cox and Allied Families of Richardson, Baker, Gambill, McGimsey, etc., (Richard Cox, 1500, Bishop of Ely, England, to the descendants of Capt. John Cox of Ashe County, North Carolina and Lt. David Cox of Grayson County, Virginia) may be bought from the compiler: Mr. Verl F. Weight, 5343 Halsted Avenue, Carmichael, California. Price: $12.00 postpaid.

SOUTHERN RELATIVES, Volume II, by Mrs. John S. Hammonds, Pipe Creek, Texas, is a supplement to her Volume I with many additional families. The book contains the following families with many branches: Alexander, Bonner, Bozeman, Carter, Chappell, Clower, Cook, Cowan, Cox, Davis, Dawson, Hammonds, Harris, Heath, Hobbs, Lester, Longstreth, Low (Lowe), Lynes (Lines), Munch, Mustin, Phillips, Preston, Randolph, Roberts, Rogers, Selby, Smith, Tatum, Wingfield and Wooten. Price: $8.85 from the compiler, Mrs. John S. Hammonds, Pipe Creek, Texas.

DESCENDANTS OF WILLIAM DUNCAN, THE ELDER, of Culpeper County, Virginia, is available from the compiler, Nancy R. Roy, 10250 Prospect Avenue, Space 23, Santee, California. Price: $12.50 including postage.

THE SHERRILL FAMILY, 1531 members, 12 generations, 300 years in America, compiled by Dr. W. L. Kitchens, 3037 14th Street, Port Arthur, Texas. Price: $7.50.

THE TRIUMPHANT TRIALS, TOILS, AND TRIBULATIONS OF REVOLUTIONARY PIONEER
MOTHER, ELIZABETH BRIDGEWATER CONWAY --- A Biography to Show the Human Portrait of this Heroine of the Western Frontier

Paper given by Virginia Walton Brooks (Mrs. Berry B., Jr.) at the April meeting of the Memphis Genealogical Society.

Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway was a native Virginian of English parentage. About 1750-52 she became the wife of John Conway, Sr., a Latin scholar and teacher, who had emigrated from his Dublin, Ireland, home to Virginia. His teaching profession caused them to establish several homes in Virginia and Kentucky. Their family Bible, owned by Mrs. Berry B. Brooks, a descendant, records the name and birth of nine of their children. Family tradition tells us that they lived in Spotsylvania County, Virginia. From the war and pension records of their four sons we learn that each of them was born, or enlisted for military service in a different Virginia county. The birth dates of their five daughters and four sons ranged from January 11, 1753 to June 25, 1775, a span of twenty-two years of childbearing. Yet this sturdy mother lived an additional thirty-four years, dying July 30, 1809.

Being the mother of nine children involves a busy life of domesticity, plus the fact they made frequent changes in home and locale. It can be assumed the income of a Latin teacher was not a lucrative one, and was inadequate for such a large and growing family. Thus adding extra burdens upon the mother to clothe and feed her family properly.

John Conway, Jr. stated on his pension application, that he was born in Henrico County, Virginia, on August 10, 1758. Joseph Conway, the fourth son, and ancestor of Mrs. Brooks, was born in Greenbrier County, Virginia (now West Virginia), December 14, 1763. Jesse Conway enlisted from Red Island, in Montgomery County, Virginia, and Samuel, the eldest son, also enlisted from southwest Virginia. John Conway, Jr. was the first of his family to become a "Pioneer of the West." He served under Capt. William Harrod's Company in the Western Country (later Kentucky) in 1777. He returned to Virginia to induce his family to move into the undeveloped frontier of the west. The Conways had moved from Henrico County, into western Virginia, beyond the Allegheny Mountains, then onward to reside in the vast wilderness of what we know as Kentucky, in 1799.

These freedom-loving Virginians were weary, worn pioneers as they trudged the long and uninhabited trails of the buffalo into the fertile valley of the Ohio River. They moved under the constant threat of surprise attack by stealthy savages as they followed the buffalo tracks, on their exploration of the wilds of the aboriginal terrain of Bourbon County, Kentucky, then the far Western Country. This perilous, arduous trek was hardest on the younger children and courageous mother, who was responsible for their well-being along the long trail through the wilderness. They had to provide their own food and shelter along the extended journey into the unknown. The youngest children were four year old Sarah and nine year old Nancy. Joseph was sixteen, Jesse was eighteen, John, Jr. was twenty-one, and Samuel was twenty-three. The sons had been brought up on the use of arms and the pursuit of game. There were militia posted at different garrisons to guard the frontier settlements. The Conways' destination was Ruddell's Station, on the upper waters of Licking River, in the present county of Bourbon, in Kentucky. A rude log cabin was constructed for their habitation. Every able-bodied man and boy was engaged in backwoods soldiery as a militiaman of frontier Western Country. He broke the land, planted the crops, and protected the fort. These frontiersmen and women came in their strength and determination with ax and rifle to conquer a wilderness. In that early settlement the pioneers were harassed by the Indians who robbed the settlers of their peltry, furs, horses, and crops. The Conways were in the wilds, far beyond succor or relief. With frontier-pushing energy they were brought into contact with the savage Indians who represented a figure of terror and possible sudden death. The hard-pressed settlement and outpost was under constant threat of annihilation.

Ruddle's Station was known as Hinkson's Station, located on the east bank of South Licking on the buffalo trace which ran to the Blue Lickings.

Here Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway labored under the most harrowing, uncertain, and trying conditions in her new home in the far wilderness, away from family, friends, adequate protection from the Indians, and without the necessities of life. To all this was added the constant threat of swift and deadly attack by Indians and crop failure, with its resulting starvation. It was necessary for her to uphold the spirits of her entire family and make the best of her hazardous lot in life on the frontier. Elizabeth and John gave their children the elements of a plain English education, plus a knowledge of Latin. Thus the Kentuckian Conways became Indian Fighters and Frontiersmen. These brave frontierswomen, Elizabeth and her young daughters, were ever alert to the dangers of the wrath of the red man on the warpath devastating frontier settlements. They must bear their share of the responsibility to defend their home and lives from Indian raids and attacks. The father and four sons had enlisted in the militia to help fight the blood-thirsty Indians, who preyed on the settlements.

Early in the spring of 1780, the danger of marauding Indians became so great that these migrator families were obliged to leave their own roughhewn log homes to move into the fort for protection. While the women-folk and children remained within the fort, the men went out daily to work, clearing the land and planting the crops, alternating this work with acting in the capacity of guards having their guns ready to protect the workers against an Indian attack.

Ruddle's Station, and the Conway family, had escaped the terror of a devastating Indian raid until a peaceful Sunday morning, on that fateful day, June 19, 1780, when Elizabeth and John Conway's youngest son was scalped by marauding Indians sent by the British. There was no fore-warning that this was not to be like any other Sunday at the fort.

Early in the morning Joseph Conway and two of his young boy companions left the fort early to drive in the cows for milking. The cows were found grazing on the opposite side of the nearby river, which was but a shallow stream at this point. The boys started driving the cows back toward the fort, but when they reached the river, they caught a large loggerhead turtle, and carried it back to the sandy beach to entertain themselves by teasing it with willow twigs to make it snap at them. Some of the men from the fort were down at the edge of the water on the near side of the stream washing their hands and faces for breakfast. An Indian, lying concealed in the bushes near where the boys were playing with the turtle, fired on Joseph Conway, wounding him in the side, and then rushed out on him and tore off his scalp, broke his skull with his deadly tomahawk, and left the defenseless youngster for dead. His two young teenage friends managed to escape a similar fate and saved themselves. It was done so quickly that the men on the opposite bank of the shallow stream were unable to give any assistance. The alarm was given at the fort; the men hurried out with their guns and scoured the woods, but found no trace of the Indian or his comrades. Swiftly, suddenly, and without warning the stealthy red man had attacked sixteen year old Joseph with agile and cruel blows in all his native savagery.

After the ravaging disaster of this inhumane attack, young Joseph was rescued, revived, and, in time recovered from the point of death. Joseph's head bled alarmingly. The wound in his side was slight compared with the scalped head. Back at the fort Joseph's mutilated scalp wounds were treated with an application of wads of cobwebs made into a poltice to stanch the blood. Even though considered unhygienic now, it saved the youngster's life. Of necessity Elizabeth Conway was well versed in, and heavily dependent upon homemade remedies. In this emergency the life of her youngest son was at stake. Anxiety, grief, and fear were coupled with terror as her son's life lingered at death's door. He required constant care and attention as he began to regain consciousness and strength. The fort was thus alerted to further attack to follow this display of brutal, brazen, and barbaric attack upon a defenseless lad. They were aware that the heathen Indian had been a scout for the British, and was furnished with firearms and ammunition by the British to raid and attack the frontier settlers.

The frontiersmen and women had not recovered from the shock of the scalping of Joseph, when, on June 22, 1780, Captain Henry Bird, Englishman, attacked Ruddle's Station with British, Canadian, and Indian Army troops with deadly assault. Bravely the men fought to hold back the assault of British soldiers and red hordes sent down upon them by Lord Henry Hamilton at Detroit, the French-Canadian city far to the north. They were equipped with cannon, having cut a road through the wilderness forest for hauling the cannon. The fort was proof only against common rifle balls, and quite inadequate against cannon attack. Surrender was inevitable. The British commander, Captain Henry Bird, promised protection and safe transport to Detroit of all the dwellers in the fort, but in this he failed. To prevent further bloodshed and death, the brave frontiersmen surrendered the fort at Ruddle's Station on condition that the British would take complete command of the prisoners, which comprised the men of the garrison, their courageous wives and helpless children, including Joseph who was scalped three days previously. It will ever be a blot on the record and integrity of Captain Bird that he broke his solemn word and turned the prisoners over to the frenzied red men, who proceeded to march the hapless victims over one hundred sixty miles to Detroit with vengeful inhumanity and cruelty. British indifference had amounted to connivance at the capture and handling of the prisoners of Ruddle's Station.

Although the life of Joseph Conway was held in the balance following his brush with death only three days previously, no consideration was shown for his desperate condition. During the confusion and trouble of this perilous journey to Detroit, no effort could be made to dress Joseph's scalp wounds, and the weather being hot, green flies and creepers made their appearance. A kind old lady, Mrs. Weisman, among the captives, picked out the loathsome insects and dressed the boy's scalp and continued to help wait on him until the wound healed. On this long march there were many terrible incidents of cruelty and ruthlessness by the conquerors. History tells us more of Joseph Conway on this merciless march -- "he was forced to march barefooted, his feet bleeding at almost every step, with the Indians, from the Ohio River to Detroit. The blood flowed down his back from the raw and unhealed wounds in the head, from which the scalp was taken. Still he was able to trudge on amidst pain and suffering by his barbarous captors. A white woman, who was also a captive, with the characteristic sympathy and kindness which belongs to her sex, gave Captain Conway a handkerchief, which she tied with womanly tenderness around his bleeding head to protect the gaping wounds from the weather. It was a most humane act, and relieved his sufferings greatly during that long, tiresome, and tedious march." (From: Darby's "Personal Recollections")

An aunt of the author, Miss Gladys Walton, attorney-at-law, of St. Louis, Missouri, writes, "One of my earliest recollections is that of my mother, Louisa Conway Walton, showing me a picture of her grandfather, Joseph Conway, and pointing out particularly the wig that he wore because of his bald and scarred head from the scalplings." (Excerpts from an address she gave July 11, 1934 to the members of the St. Louis Round Table.) I quote further from Gladys Walton, "Between this pioneering Joseph Conway of Virginia and Kentucky, and Missouri, born in December 1763, deceased in 1830, and me, if you will believe it, are but two links, --- my mother and her father."

Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway, her husband John, her sons John, Jr. and Joseph, and their three youngest daughters, Elizabeth Conway Daugherty, young bride of William, she aged twenty, Nancy, ten, and Sarah, aged five years, were brutally forced to march along the tortuous journey northward as British captives under Indian command for the British, as prisoners of war, defenders of the fort at Ruddle's Station. Never were defenseless human beings treated with less humanity, consideration, courtesy, nor less protection to their life's safety as prisoners of war, than these pioneers, especially the women and children captives.

By intent and malice the British had placed these savages in complete charge of marching the white prisoners to deliver them to the British authority in Detroit at a distance that challenged the durability and stamina of every person on the march. These captives were miserable to the last degree. The old, the ill, the weak, and the very young, were required to keep the same pace as the men in the conquered party. Some were wantonly massacred by the Indian guards when they grew faint and weary and fell by the wayside. There were no facilities for feeding the captives and no shelter for the many night stops along the way.

Every member of the Conway family, mother, father, two sons, even scalped Joseph, and the three daughters, not only survived the march, but also survived the four years of cruel and miserable captivity in the cold north country. After this death march to Detroit, the city of the bitter cold winters, began their long ordeal of suffering and waiting, before finally being released. Here they were confined for four years of agony, privation, hardships, and without adequate shelter, food or clothing, or consideration.

Five year old Sarah was separated from her parents and "adopted" by an Indian and his squaw as their own child. They never saw her during their captivity. This added heavily to the heartaches and hardships of their confinement. Nine years after their march to Detroit, after the Conways had returned to Kentucky, they were able to get a trace of the whereabouts of their baby girl. John Conway searched and finally found her, now a girl of fourteen, who had endured nine years of life as an Indian. By paying a heavy ransom to her captors, or foster parents of the red race, he was able to return his youngest child to her home in Kentucky, thus the long search and suspense was ended happily.

Through prayer and the Will of God, Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway, her husband John, and their captive children survived the rigors and exposure and indignities of prison life for four years of severe Michigan winters as prisoners of war. The entire family was held captive for four years, except Sarah, until June 1, 1784, when they were released to find their way back home to Kentucky, on their own power, as best they might, dependent upon their own resourceful guidance to survive the long journey back to the Western Country far to the south.

During their four years confinement Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway had suffered the same privations as the soldiers who were actually enlisted in the militia. These persons were regarded as prisoners of war both by the civil and military authorities. The fact that she was able and capable of giving material aid in the protection of the fort is evidenced by the fact that she was strong enough to withstand all the hardships of the journey to Detroit, caring for her young ones, her loved ones, along the trail to see that they did not fall by the way and get tomahawked by their wild savage captors in charge of the march north. Those who had not kept pace were slaughtered brutally. Besides being a Patroit, Defender of the Fort, and Prisoner of War for four years, she rendered material aid for the Cause of Independence by furnishing clothing and food to her menfolk and those within the Ruddell's Station settlement. She had urged her husband and four sons to give service in the militia to protect their freedom and win independence from England, and King George III. She had espoused the cause of the colonists on the rugged frontier. She had aided the cause of independence by such aid and resistance as she could give when Ruddell's Station was attacked by the British and Indians. She and her family had pledged their strength, support, and allegiance to the rebellious colonies against the British. During the four years of brutal captivity in Detroit she had resisted and repulsed the proffered alternative of siding with the captors, the British, and fighting on their side. Truly she was a loyal heroine, Revolutionary Mother, Pioneer of the West, who contributed her strength and endurance toward the development, protection, and conquest of the new Western Frontier. For this service the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution gave service to Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway as Patroit, Defender of the Fort, and Prisoner of War.

Again I quote from Darby's "Personal Recollections," CAPTAIN JOSEPH CONWAY, HIS SUFFERINGS AT THE HANDS OF THE INDIANS, pp. 81-84: "The incredible sufferings, privations, hardships, and exposure which Captain Conway was made to endure during his captivity are beyond precedent, and can hardly be described, and, but for his vigorous constitution he must have sunk under them. On the bleak shores of the Canadian frontier he was detained four years as a prisoner, with no human habitation to protect him from the severity of the weather, and made to endure and to bear all the privations incident to that barbarous condition of life."

Without their beloved Sarah, the six Conways trekked on foot back to Licking River, Kentucky, after their release from Detroit. They covered the tiresome journey south by August 1784. What rejoicing and thanksgiving greeted their return as hopes of their survival had vanished with the passing years of the war. With the encouragement and aid of friends and compatriots, the Conways set out, once again, to build a home and make a new life on the frontier, now won from the British, even though not entirely free from Indian threats and the wilderness itself.

Upon Joseph Conway's return to Licking River he went out on Harmer's Campaigns against the Indians. I quote further from Darby's "Personal Recollection," "He fought under General Harmer, and was in the battle which marked his defeat. Once, when the Indians were in hot pursuit, he dodged behind a tree and turned and fired and again loaded his gun as he ran, and in this manner killed seven Indians. He also fought under Gen. Wayne, and shared in his victories. The horrors of the border war he witnesses in common with his associates, but his sufferings far exceeded those of his comrades. In different battles he was shot three different times. He was tomahawked by the savages and scalped three times."

Thus a few hundred bold hunters, woodsmen, and fighters had held on to western outposts of the great western regions to preserve the Mississippi River basin from the continued British rule. Otherwise this Canadian line would have been established on the Appalachian crest. Before George Rogers Clark's great victory of the Revolution, in his conquest, the southern border of Canada was the Ohio River. The land he conquered was settled by Canadians governed from Detroit. It had been conquered from the French only fifteen years before. Clark added this territory to the new nation. From the British empire and hostile Indian hordes, Clark took over a quarter of a million square miles of the most fertile and habitable land on the North American continent; the Ohio Valley to the Father of Waters, the Mighty Mississippi. He gave us Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and the north east tip of Minnesota, 245,000 square miles. He stretched the United States to the Mississippi River for the victorious thirteen original colonies.

For the next twenty-five years Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway led a less hazardous, though active and useful life from 1784 until her death, July 30, 1809. Her husband, John Conway, Sr. had died May 3, 1801 in Campbell County, Kentucky. Thus we have followed the trials, tribulations, service, and the sufferings of the Conway family in their share of winning freedom for the colonies from the yoke of Great Britain, and in the opening up and development of the frontier. Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway, John Conway, Sr., and Joseph Conway have been accredited by the DAR for their service as Patriots, Defenders of the Fort, and as Prisoners of War for four years. The war record of the other three sons has been recognized, as well. Samuel, the eldest son, was engaged in the manufacture of gun powder for the army. All five of the Conway men served as militiamen in fighting and protecting the frontier Western Country, in the service of their country. John, Jr. and Jesse were brave fighters, also.

We leave Elizabeth and John to their reward, and take up the life of their youngest son, Joseph. Ripley's "Believe It or Not" gave an illustrated account of Joseph Conway with the following record of his Indian tortures: "Captain Joseph Conway, St. Louis, Missouri, Scalped 3 times, tomahawked 3 times, shot 3 times, left for dead 3 times, recovered and died at the age of 70." From Darby's "Personal Recollections" we glean, "Captain Joseph Conway was one of the pioneers of the West. He came to Louisiana during the Spanish times, and settled in Bonhomme, St. Louis District, in the year 1796, on the piece of land granted to him that same year by Zenon Trudeau, at that time lieutenant governor of Upper Louisiana. Capt. Conway came to Kentucky in early youth and as soon as he was able to bear arms he took an active and distinguished part in the Indian wars which accompanied the early settlements of that state. Young, brave, and daring, he was associated with Daniel Boone and many of the bold spirits of that time in almost all their hazardous and dangerous enterprises. Boone came to this country and got his grant of land about the same time that Capt. Conway obtained his. He improved his farm, and cultivated and lived on it for more than thirty years, and up to the time of his death, which occurred on the 27th of December, 1830. Often when I was a boy, when he would come into the house, would I in my boyish curiosity creep around his chair to get a good look at the back of his head, to see where the Indians had taken off the scalps from his head. Capt. Conway was, in fact, one of the bravest and noblest men that ever lived in the State of Missouri, and of the strictest integrity. He left a name and a fame that commanded the respect and affectionate regard of all who knew him during life. He raised a large family, several of his sons having been honored with positions of public trust, such as judge of the County Court, sheriff of St. Louis County, and member of the Legislature, discharging the duties of the various offices they filled with honor and credit to themselves and to the entire satisfaction of the public."

In 1776 Kentucky was organized as a separate county of Virginia. In 1780 it was divided into three counties. In 1787 John Conway is witness to a deed in Bourbon County, Virginia (later Kentucky). On June 1, 1792, Kentucky was admitted as the 15th state of the Union. Since these recollections were written at a later date than their occurrence, the reference is made to their location identification at the time of the account given. In fact these so-called peregrinating pioneers may have lived in the various counties of Virginia, yet never left home! Let us consider the formation of counties. York County, Virginia, of 1634 was the parent of all the counties in which the John Conway, Sr. family lived, from York down to Greenbrier, erected thus: King William, 1701; Spotsylvania, 1720; Shenandoah, 1722; Caroline, 1727; Augusta, 1738; Montgomery, 1776; Greenbrier, 1777. In reality since Joseph Conway was born December 14, 1763, he was born in Augusta County, that became Montgomery County in 1776 and Greenbrier County in 1777. Now Greenbrier is in West Virginia. Since John Conway is said to have lived in Henrico, according to records, in 1758, 1763-64, perhaps his land extended into Henrico. From the August 3, 1779 Montgomery County, Virginia, Court: "Thomas Conway, sum of 100 lbs. and his Securities in sum of 50 each. John Conway, 50 lbs. engaged in late Insurrection of this country." Thomas and John Conway signed. Then John Conway and family leave for Kentucky, joining a party of migrators who left Virginia, and journeyed toward the Western Country.

On February 22, 1792, in Bourbon County, Kentucky, Joseph Conway married Elizabeth Caldwell, with the consent of her father, Samuel. She was born September 1, 1773 in Virginia, died September 30, 1821 in St. Louis County, Missouri, and is buried in the family burial ground near their homestead. She lies at rest beside her husband and her family on a hilltop, beneath sheltering trees, north of their home, on part of the 400 acres of original land grant that Joseph received in 1798. This valuable land is now located on the city limits of the metropolis of St. Louis. This Creve Coeur Lake Settlement is now known as Chesterfield, Bonhomme Township, St. Louis County, Missouri. The old pioneer home still stands at what is now the corner of Conway and White Roads. On September 20, 1959 the Lucy Jefferson Lewis Chapter, N.S.D.A.R. of New Madrid, Missouri, marked the grave of Captain Joseph Conway as a Revolutionary soldier and patriot. The ceremony was attended by many of his proud descendants. April 6, 1813 Joseph Conway was again called into the service of his country. This time he was called into the active service of the United States, by His Excellency Benjamin Howard, Governor of the Territory of Missouri. Again he was facing the British against his homeland. He served in the Infantry with the rank of Captain in the War of 1812. At the age of 49 years he had served in two wars against England, fighting for his young country with vigor and strength.

The challenge to explore the Pacific northwest followed after President Thomas Jefferson bought the huge Louisiana Territory from Napoleon in 1803. President Jefferson tendered to Captain Joseph Conway the command of what we know as the Lewis and Clark Expedition, but he declined the appointment, and the honor went to Lewis and Clark. Joseph Conway felt that his first responsibility was his family and their welfare, so he did not undertake the 1,600 mile exploration up the Missouri River to its source, across the Rockies, with descents to the Columbia River and the Pacific Ocean. Joseph Conway was on hand to give his blessings and good wishes to the small army detachment of thirty-one men in the Lewis and Clark Expedition that afternoon of May 14, 1804. The "robust, healthy, hardy young men of the Corps of Discovery" set out in a keelboat and two pirogues, not to return until September 1806. For five months the party had outfitted at Wood River, fifteen miles north of St. Louis, where the shifting Mississippi River then received the Missouri River. Every one was eager to learn the results of the exploration of the Louisiana Territory, but Joseph Conway felt he owed his first duty to his young family of five children, that was to increase to ten. Already he had had far more than his share of adventures.

The Conways were staunch Presbyterians. Joseph Conway gave the land, diagonally across the road from his home, and assisted in furnishing the funds, material, and construction labor for the erection of Bonhomme Presbyterian Church, which stands to this day. It is said to be one of the oldest, and many contend it is the oldest Protestant Church built west of the Mississippi River. Built of sturdy stone, it stands proudly today as a landmark and monument to the Christian principles of the founding Conway family.

The fourth son of Joseph and Elizabeth Conway was Samuel Conway, born July 25, 1799; died October 28, 1870; married October 28, 1824, Mourning Baxter, born January 17, 1804 in Madison County, Kentucky, died April 29, 1845 in Missouri. She was the daughter of Green Berry Baxter and Elizabeth Jones of Madison County, Kentucky, who came to the Territory of Missouri between 1810-1814. Samuel Conway and his brother, Joseph, Jr., both served as sheriff of St. Louis County at different intervals. Samuel Conway sat on the bench of the St. Louis County Court; held a seat in the General Assembly of Missouri and was a Deacon in Bonhomme Presbyterian Church, founded by his father and Uncle. During the War Between the States the following incident is related of him. The story goes that Samuel Conway had the keys to the Bonhomme Church and wouldn't let the Yankee soldiers in when they wanted to have services. The soldiers had to threaten to shoot Mr. Conway before he would yield the keys. It delights the loyal Southern heart of the author to know her paternal great grandfather, Samuel Conway, was a "Southern Sympathizer." Samuel Conway was twelve years old when the New Madrid, Missouri, earthquake of 1811 occurred in which houses in the vicinity of his home were knocked down and the whole country shook from the shock of the quivers that tore the earth asunder and formed Reelfoot Lake in western Tennessee. Samuel and Mourning Conway were the parents of nine children.

Samuel Conway died of typhoid fever in the only illness of his life. He lived in changing times in his young nation as is evidenced by the following calculations. Samuel Conway, born July 25, 1799, native born Missourian of Anglo-Saxon parentage, was born in a Kingdom -- Spain (in 1800 Spain returned the territory to France). He was reared in an Empire -- France (France sold the entire Louisiana Territory to the United States in 1803). He was educated and spent his childhood in a Territory (in 1803 St. Louis became the capital of the Upper Louisiana Territory). He attained manhood in this Missouri Territory (became Missouri Territory in 1812). He became a citizen of a state, Missouri (Missouri, the 24th state, came into the Union as a slave state on August 10, 1821; Missouri did not secede from the Union in 1861). All of this, yet Samuel Conway never traveled more than 100 miles from where he was born. He lived out his life on his father's original land grant farm in Bonhomme District, at Chesterfield, in the Creve Coeur Lake Settlement, St. Louis County, Missouri, where he first saw the light of day. Here he died on October 28, 1870 when typhoid fever took his sturdy life with the only illness he had ever experienced in his many years on earth. He was in his 68th year.

Samuel and Mourning Baxter Conway were the parents of Louisa Conway, born April 24, 1840 on the ancestral place of her father, Samuel Conway. She died June 30, 1895, in St. Louis, Missouri, and is buried in Bellefontain. She attended Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Missouri, 1855-57. The Herbarium she created while a student there is preserved to this day by her descendant, the author. The Sibleys founded this "Female Academy" in 1827, situated on 138 acres of the highest elevation in the extreme western part of St. Charles, Missouri, then the capitol of the new state. From this high vantage point above the Missouri River a beautiful view was commanded of the rolling country side from the Linden shaded campus. On September 3, 1861 Louisa Conway became the bride of Frederick Bates Walton, grandson of Governor Frederick Bates, of Missouri, for whom he was named. His mother, Emily Caroline Bates, wife of Robert Alfred Walton, had gone back to her ancestral home, "Thornhill," in St. Louis County, Missouri, to have her first child, the eldest of eight children. To follow prideful tradition Louisa Conway Walton went to "Thornhill," to give birth to her eldest surviving son, Allan Walton, one of nine children. Allan Walton was born March 4, 1864, and died May 6, 1919 in Blytheville, Arkansas. He was a world traveler and adventurer. On October 21, 1903 he married the beauteous Virginia Warren Feild, of Jonesboro, Arkansas, on her twenty-first birthday. From Jonesboro they went to Blytheville, Arkansas, to make their home. Here he was successfully established in the wholesale grocery business and was a leader in his community. Allan and Virginia Feild Walton were the parents of Virginia Feild Walton, born in Jonesboro, Arkansas, and reared in Blytheville, Arkansas. She attended the Alma Mater of her paternal grandmother, Louisa Conway, Lindenwood College in St. Charles, Missouri. From these sturdy ancestors she derived the stamina to lead an adventurous life of world travel and jet circumnavigations. April 27, 1929, in Blytheville, Arkansas, Virginia Feild Walton became the bride of Berry Boswell Brooks, Jr. of Memphis, Tennessee, a renowned sportsman, big game hunter, and world traveler. They were the parents of Virginia Walton Brooks, born June 4, 1933 in Memphis, Tennessee. June 29, 1957 Virginia Brooks became the wife of Allen Martin of Katonah, New York. They are the parents of Ann Feild Martin, born April 1, 1959.

From Elizabeth Bridgewater Conway, Revolutionary Pioneer, Mother, and Heroine, we trace through four generations of Conways down through four direct generations to complete eight generations to the youngest descendant, four year old Ann Feild Martin, her great, great, great, great, great granddaughter.

ROANE COUNTY, TENNESSEE TAX LIST - 1805

Transcribed by Mable H. Thornton (Mrs. Robert E.), Rockwood, Tennessee

The 1805 Tax List of Roane County is on file in the Tennessee State Archives. The 1802 and 1808 Tax Lists were published in Emma Middleton Wells' History of Roane County (Chattanooga, no date) which also contains data on many families. The Goodspeed Publishing Company's History of Tennessee ... East Tennessee Edition (Nashville, 1887) contains biographical material relating to some of the early settlers. Capt. W. E. McElwee (1837-1929) wrote a series of articles on local history which were published in The Rockwood Times in 1910 and 1911. Microfilm copies of these newspapers are available at the Tennessee State Library and Archives.

In 1805 Roane County included much of the area which fell into Rhea and Bledsoe Counties upon their creation in 1807. Many of the names on this list are of record in Rhea, Bledsoe and Morgan Counties.

The transcriber will furnish references for the notes or other data from her files provided postage is enclosed.

The above footnotes were obtained by Mrs. Thornton from the following sources:

1. Abstracted wills and noted estates mentioned in Roane County through 1840.
2. Typed copy of marriage bonds through 1838, plus some of later dates, using the marriage bonds only to the extent that the daughter's married name was given in the will. If used, a check was made for a corresponding marriage and when found, the year only and name of groom as given in bonds would be included.
3. County court minutes used for data on formation of county and jury lists.
4. Various lists which have appeared in print, primarily the Rhea County tax list of 1808, and a list compiled by Capt. McElwee 1910 giving the names of men "known to him" as Revolutionary Soldiers. Many of these men never drew pensions and each has been indicated as a "non-pensioner."
5. Pension applications and three family genealogists.
6. Abstracts made from records in Roane, Rhea and Bledsoe Counties, primarily deeds.

NOTE: The term "John Jones, dec'd Oct., 1801" means by Oct., 1801 when some action was taken in court.

The Little Sisters of the Poor have a plot for burial of their order, also a plot for burial of the inmates of the home. The nuns have erected a monument for all on this plot. This cemetery also has 23 American Legion, World War soldiers buried there plus some Spanish War soldiers.

From different states come the Irish Travelers on May 1st to bury their dead who have died within the year. The dead are sent to the vault to await May 1st of the coming year, and families meet on that day. They carry their loved one's body to St. Patrick's Church for the funeral services before returning to the graveyard for burial.

The first Catholic cemetery was located at St. Cloud in the southern part of the city. N.C. & St. L. R.R. in building a road, bought the ground and the bodies were removed to Mt. Calvary, starting March 15, 1901 and ending May 1, 1901, with 686 removals.
